THE FOURFRONT GROUP TEAMS UP WITH THE FORESTRY COMMISSION

The Fourfront Group, one of the UK's leading commercial interior specialists, has set up a new environmental programme and partnered with the Forestry Commission to 'put something back' into the environment through a conservation volunteering scheme.

On Friday 20th March, 2009 thirty volunteers from the Fourfront Group led by Managing Director Clive Lucking spent the day 'getting their hands dirty' in Alice Holt Forest to improve wildlife habitats and increase bio-diversity in the area.

The volunteers worked in small teams in one of the Forest's designated areas of continuous management. Activities focused on the protection of the Purple Emperor Butterfly, which, although scarce in most of the UK, has a natural strong hold in the Forest. Volunteers coppiced willow and thinned a large area of woodland along a stream corridor to increase light and encourage willow growth for the butterflies and other insects. They also built small dams to encourage local wet areas and created habitat piles for small mammals such as mice and hedgehogs during the winter.

The operation was carried out under the watchful eye of Forestry Commission Ecologist, Jay Doyle and Landscape Architect, Paul Cordle, who were impressed with the amount the Group had managed to achieve by the end of the day.

Clive Lucking, Group Managing Director says 'The day has been excellent, not only in terms of achieving our environmental aims and putting something back in to the environment, but also in creating a greater environmental understanding and awareness for everyone. I was overwhelmed with the uptake of this scheme, every single employee volunteered, which I think demonstrates our employees belief and drive to make a difference environmentally'.

Clive Lucking adds '2009 is all about the Group minimising our environmental impact and this volunteering initiative forms part of our wider programme of positive socio-environmental initiatives, which also includes our charity support and ISO4001 accreditation.'

Julian Williams, Alice Holt Park Manager says 'The project went really well. It has improved the biodiversity, habitats and landscape of the area. My staff's feedback about the Fourfront Group was very positive and they thoroughly enjoyed working with them. We could not have achieved the work completed with our current resources and this programme has inspired us to look at developing further similar schemes in the future'.
